SECRETARY'S REPORT, No. II., 1892

To the Class of Eighty-nine:

I take pleasure in presenting a Report of the lives of the members of the class since graduation.

Since the publication of the last Report two graduates of the class, Frank Henry Eames and George Washington Black, and one who was connected with the class for a part of one year, Frank James Lemon, have died.

The class baby, Katharine Saltonstall, whose portrait appears as the frontispiece of this Report, was born April 10, 1891. The class committee sent to her (for a "class cradle") a noble silver loving-cup.

I would thank the class for the full and generally prompt answers which they have sent to my circulars, and I would especially thank those classmates who have sent me newspaper cuttings or other information about members of the class.

I hope that future Reports may be published at intervals of about five years. If there are many changes in post-office addresses a list of addresses will be prepared and sent out oftener than that. Corrections and completions of the list of addresses are particularly desired.

The whole class is indebted to Hunneman, who has kindly written the sketch of the history of the University from 1889 to 1892 which appears in the Report.

JAMES HARDY ROPES.

HARVARD COLLEGE.

Class of 1889.

SECRETARY'S REPORT II. JUNE 1892.

SUMNER RANKIN ALBEE.

August 1889 to September 1890, stenographer in the office of the Judge Advocate General, Navy Department, Washington, D. C. Since October 1890, in the Harvard Law School.

BURT McVAY ALLISON.

After leaving college spent eight months in Boston in the office of the Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation, Limited, of London, England. Since March 1, 1889, has been at Birmingham, Ala., as State Agent for that company. "Have travelled all through the South, a grand country of possibilities, — the original people most hospitable, men gallant, women beautiful. The possibilities are in every line; that of most interest to me is the literary development, many of the younger authors being among my acquaintances."

Has published verses for various papers. Is a member of the Komos Klub, Apollo Club, Cleveland Club, Birmingham Athletic Club.

"I extend a cordial invitation to any Harvard man to visit Birmingham, being in a position to introduce him to the leading business men and into the best homes."

OSCAR MILLION ANDERSON.

"On leaving college I entered the employ of the Union Pacific Railway, at their headquarters at Omaha, Neb., where I remained for a year. Was then transferred to the Superintendent's office, at Denver, Colo., where I remained until March 1, 1892, when I resigned to go into the mercantile business with my father at Neligh, Neb."

HERBERT FRENCH ATKINS.

"In '89–'90 I taught in Dennysville, Me., and Mattapoisett, Mass. During '90–'91 I acted as General Agent in New Hampshire for the Century Dictionary. I am attending the Harvard Law School this year, and expect to graduate in course and practise law. My address until June 30, '94, will probably continue to be Hollis 28."

CHARLES CARLTON AYER.

"I was a member of the Graduate Department of Harvard College until Christmas 1889, after which I did private tutoring for the rest of the school year. In the summer of 1890 I made a trip to Colorado. In the fall of the same year I came to Leipsic, and entered the University, where I am still engaged in the study of Modern Philosophy. In the vacations I have travelled in Germany, Austria, and Switzerland." — Leipsic, 13 March, 1892.

IRVING BABBITT.

"I accepted on graduation a position as professor of classics in the College of Montana, at Deer Lodge. I resigned my situation there last June, in order to carry out my original plan of graduate study, and sailed from New York last September for Liverpool. After a short stay in England, I came to Paris and during the past year have been attending courses here (mainly in the Romance languages and Sanskrit) at the Sorbonne, the Collège de France, and the Ecole des Hautes Etudes. It is likely that I shall return to Harvard next year to complete my graduate course.

While in Montana I read an address before the State Teachers' Association on the Study of Latin. I was elected a member of the American Oriental Society at its last meeting."

HENRY LEWIS BAILEY.

"Taught from November '89 to March '90, at Tuskegee, Ala. Have since taught in High School in Washington, D. C. Am also student at Howard Medical School."

Married, September 16, 1891, Ida D. Jones of Danville, Va.

ROBERT STANTON BALDWIN.

Began journalistic work in Worcester, in the fall of 1889, as reporter on the Worcester Spy. Later became exchange reader, and is now assistant editor. Is also secretary of the Spy Publishing Company.

In Europe, September 1891 to February 1892, visiting Germany, Italy, Egypt, Greece, France, and England. "Was specially interested in the remains of antiquity, — notably the ruins of the Acropolis,— in Greek sculpture, in Italian art, and Wagner operas." Made a trip through Virginia in 1890, and a trip to Fortress Monroe in the winter of 1891.

Has published letters, book reviews, news paragraphs and narratives, and editorial paragraphs in the Worcester Daily Spy and the Massachusetts Spy.

Is a junior member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Commandery of the State of Massachusetts.

ALEX GALT BARRET.

"The winter of 1889–90 I spent in Louisville. In September 1890, I entered the Harvard Law School. I spent last summer in Europe, partly in England, partly on the continent. I belong to the Louisville Athletic Club."

PAUL BARTHOLOW.

Studied medicine in Philadelphia, where he is now practising.

Is a member of the Pennsylvania Historical Society, and of the Harvard Club of Philadelphia. M. D., Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON BASSETT.

1889–90, member of the Graduate School, Harvard University. Since January, 1891, has taught English, French, and History at the Belmont School, Belmont, Massachusetts. A. M., Harvard, 1890.

CHARLES CLARENCE BATCHELDER.

July 1889 to July 1890, in Europe. Since July 1890, with W. H. Leatherbee & Son, wholesale lumber dealers, Boston.

Has made various trips in the United States. Besides sundry reviews and other articles, has published an article in the Youth's Companion on "Vesuvius in Action."

EDWARD CRAIG BATES.

"Since graduating from college I have resided in my native town — Westborough, Massachusetts. From October 1889 to June 1890, I attended the Law School of Boston University,— until I was admitted to the bar,— and then I spent a year in the law office of Hopkins & Bacon, at Worcester.

In October 1890 Governor Brackett appointed me Justice of the First District Court of Eastern Worcester, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. Dexter Newton, of Southborough. This court has jurisdiction in the towns of Westborough, Grafton, Southborough, and Northborough.

I opened a law office in Westborough, in July 1891, and attend to such business as does not conflict with my duties as Justice.

In September 1891 the "History of Westborough" was published. Rev. Herman P. De Forest of Detroit, Michigan, formerly pastor of the Evangelical Church in Westborough, wrote the first part; the preparation of the second part occupied a portion of my time for the preceding four years. The book was prepared and published under the auspices of a committee chosen by the town. My only other literary work is an article entitled "The Story of the Cotton-gin," which appeared in the New England Magazine for May 1890.

The only club of which I am a member, outside of the local literary, social, and historical organizations, is the Norfolk Club, of Boston.

I was married January 21, 1892, to Miss Grace Belknap Winch, daughter of the late Hon. Calvin M. Winch, of Boston.

ARTHUR CLEVELAND BENT.

After leaving college, until March 1890, worked in a bank in Taunton, Mass. From March 1890 to October 1891, worked in a mill in Fall River, learning the business. Since October 1891, has been running a weaving mill in Plymouth, Mass., as agent for the Mason Machine Works.

Is a member of the Harvard Club of Taunton, the Harvard Club of Fall River, and the Nuttall Ornithological Club of Cambridge.

FREDERIC HENDEE BENT.

Since leaving college, has been clerk in the Mason Machine Works, Taunton, Mass.

Is a member of local clubs, and of the Taunton Republican Club. "Joined in the work of the Taunton Republican Club in the last campaign, 1891, and am treasurer of said club."

WILLIAM BURDELLE BENTLEY.

"After graduation, I remained in Cambridge one year, and until the middle of March of the next year. During the first year I acted as assistant in Chemistry 1, also working on research work under Professor Jackson. The second year I continued the research work, but did no teaching. The summer of 1890 was spent in chemical work at the United States Torpedo Station, Newport, R. I., under the direction of Professor Charles E. Munroe. In March 1891, I received the appointment of adjunct professor of chemistry and physics at Arkansas Industrial University, Fayetteville, Arkansas, and have been living here since that time."

A. M., Harvard, 1890.

Published, June 1889, with W. H. Warren, '89, a paper on the "Constitution of Metabromdinitrotoluol"; and with Professor C. Loring Jackson, May 1891, "On the Products obtained by the action of Nitric Acid upon Bromtrinitrophenyl malonic ester."

Married, December 15, 1891, at Cambridge, Mass., Susan Easte Prescott, daughter of Eben C. Prescott of Cambridge.

WILLIAM REED BIGELOW.

"Since leaving college has spent the three years, ending in June, at the Harvard Law School, and has resided during that time at 26 Hollis Hall, Cambridge. He has not married, travelled, addressed public meetings, or held offices of profit. He has received no degrees up to date, but hopes for an LL. B. at Commencement. He has taken no part in politics beyond exercising a citizen's right of suffrage, and joining the Harvard Republican Club, of which he is a vice-president. He was made a member of the Thayer Law Club at the Harvard Law School, and has passed the examinations for the Suffolk bar of Massachusetts, to which he was admitted as an attorney and counsellor at law, February 2, 1892.

In connection with Mr. C. A. Hight, he published volumes sixteen and seventeen of the Harvard Index. He has also written a few articles for the newspapers, and an article entitled 'Harvard's Better Self,' which was published in the December number of the New England Magazine of 1890."

ISAAC EDWARD BINGHAM.

After travelling in the West six months, studied law at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., in the office of Edward Crumney, Esq., and of Herrick & Tosey. Was admitted to the bar of New York in December 1891, and has since practised law in Poughkeepsie.

Is a member of the Hickory Club (a Democratic club of Poughkeepsie).

"Have been inspector of election, ballot clerk, and member of municipal service examining board. Have been a delegate to several Democratic conventions."

GEORGE HENRY BLACK.

Born at Washington, Connecticut, February 17, 1866.
Died at Washington, Connecticut, May 4, 1891.

He fitted for college at the Gunnery School, and entered Harvard with the class of '89. At college, he showed in his favorite courses a marked ability. After graduation his desire — in fact, almost the ambition of his life — was to enter the Law School. But his duty, he felt, lay elsewhere. His parents were no longer young, and except for him they were almost alone. His place, he felt, was with them. So for the present, at least, he gave up all thought of a Law School course, and devoted himself to the management of his father's large farm.

But his constitution, weakened perhaps by his sedentary life at college, was not strong enough to meet the demands put upon it. Signs of consumption began to appear, and developed so rapidly that the only hope seemed to be a change of climate. Accordingly, in the autumn of 1890, he went to Denver, Colorado. But it was too late. He failed rapidly, and a few months later he was brought home only to die.

At college, Black was well liked both by instructors and students. He had a pleasant manner, which won for him many friends. At home, among his own people, his influence was widely felt. In the management of town affairs he took an active part, and by his independence in refusing all office, he made his advice respected.

After he was brought back from the West, he lived only a few days, but in that short time he must have realized, in a way perhaps that he had not known before, how dear he was to those who knew him best. F. C. B. '91

FREDERIC CYRUS BOSWORTH.

Since leaving college has lived at Cleveland, Ohio, and at "Long View," Lorain Road, Brooklyn Township, Ohio. In January 1891, entered business with the Parkin & Bosworth Co.

"Have visited most of the eastern cities, and south to Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia; west to Cincinnati, Kansas, Iowa, through Illinois, touching Chicago; on the great lakes to Detroit, Duluth, Ashland, Wis., etc. Impressions — United States is a vast country, and deserving of our study before exploring foreign countries."

GEORGE WASHINGTON WALES BREWSTER.

"I have been in Harvard Medical School since leaving college, and expect to finish a three years course there next June."

ALBERT GALLATIN BRODHEAD.

Since January 1890, civil engineer in the employ of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., at Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania.

"I took up civil engineering as a temporary occupation. I intend to follow it for the present as a means of establishing a strong physique."

FREDERICK MANNING BROOKS.

"For the last three years I have been living in Cambridge, reading, dreaming, and studying, as a student in the Episcopal Theological School. These years have been interesting and profitable, and I believe the most agreeable of my life. My public work has been limited to the duties which ordinarily pertain to a lay-reader in some of the Boston churches. Apart from some crude attempts at sermon-writing in connection with school work, I have engaged in no literary labor. During the summers, however, having more time at my disposal, I wrote some descriptive letters published in the Boston Transcript.

For the last two summers, I have engaged in work pertaining to my profession among the Berkshire hills of Massachusetts and in the prairie towns in northern Minnesota and Dakota. The work in this latter place was a complete novelty to me, and I enjoyed it greatly. I had to cover about sixty miles a week, riding through the wheat fields in a little, black, two-wheeled sulky, or on horseback.

I had thought of going West on graduating from this school, but I have now decided to stay in Massachusetts, at least for a few years to come.

FREDERICK MELVIN BROWN.

"On Saturday of Commencement week, '89, I sailed with my family for Hâvre, by La Bourgogne. I devoted the summer and autumn until the opening of the Sorbonne, to seeing the Paris Exposition, travelling in France, and learning French. Entering the

Is Mitglied des akademischen Schachvereins zu Berlin.

GARDNER CUTTING BULLARD.

"Operative at Chase Mill, Fall River, from September, 1889, to May, 1891. At present, have charge of cotton yarn department at Harding, Whitman & Co's, Boston. Residence, Cambridge."

Is a member of the Republican Club of Massachusetts, Hamilton Club of Boston, Harvard Club of Fall River, First Corps of Cadets, Boston.

CLARENCE ALFRED BUNKER.

"Since '89 I have been in the Harvard Law School, from which I hope to graduate in June."

JOHN CABEL BRECKINRIDGE BURBANK. See Appendix.

WILLIAM FREEMAN BURDETT.

"Appointed to a clerkship in the United States Sub-Treasury, at Boston, August 1, 1889. Resigned, July 15, 1891, to accept a clerkship in the State National Bank, Boston."

ALLSTON BURR.

"I have been with the Thompson-Houston Electric Co., since November '89.

I went to Europe on July 3, 1889, and arrived in this country again November 7, 1889. Since that time I have been closely confined to the routine of business life in Boston."

Is a member of the Puritan Club and of the Boston Athletic Association.

GEORGE THOMPSON BURROWS.

"In the fall of 1889, I entered the Harvard Law School, but after six months had to leave on account of trouble with my eyes. In the fall of 1890, I began a course in the Wisconsin University Law School, at Madison, from which I expect to be graduated in June of this year, 1892. A degree from this Law School admits me to the Wisconsin bar, and as a member of the Wisconsin bar I can be admitted by courtesy to practice without any examination in almost any State in the country.

In the fall of 1892, I expect to go into the office of D. K. Tenney, Esq., of Chicago, one of the leading lawyers of that city.

Am a charter member of the Harlan Chapter of the Phi Delta Phi, which was started in the Wisconsin Law School in June 1891."

ROBERT WILDER BUSH.

In September 1889, entered the employ of the Boston Gas Light Co. Since May 1891, superintendent of the South Boston Gas Light Co.

Is a member of the Boston Athletic Association, Puritan Club, Eastern Yacht Club, New England Association of Gas Engineers, Guild of Gas Managers of New England, and of the Republican Club of Massachusetts.

GEORGE PIERCE BUTTERS. See Appendix.

WILLIAM HENRY BUTTERS. See Appendix.

ALFRED POTTS BUTTERWORTH.

Since leaving college has been engaged in the retail shoe business at Marion, Indiana, and in the wholesale shoe business at Cincinnati, Ohio, with the firm of Butterworth & Co.

Married, October 29, 1890, Annie Knower Clark, daughter of Ebenezer M. Clark of Mamaroneck, New York. Has one daughter, Ruth Clark Butterworth, born in Marion, Indiana, October 25, 1891.

RICHARD CLARKE CABOT.

1889–92, Harvard Medical School.

In the Easter vacation, 1891, made a trip to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and Alexandria, Va.

Secretary, Class of '92, Harvard Medical School.

Is a member of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Massachusetts.

HARRISON KOONS CANER.

Since leaving college has resided in Philadelphia.

Married, October 30, 1891, at St. Luke's Church, Philadelphia, Emily Thomas Colket, daughter of George H. Colket, of Philadelphia.

Is now abroad for a year, travelling in Germany, Austria, Turkey, Greece, Egypt, Palestine, Italy, France, Switzerland, and England.

Is a member of the Union League Club and of the University Club, both of Philadelphia.

GEORGE DAVIS CHASE.

Since September 1889, sub-master of Bristol Academy, Taunton Mass.

JONATHAN BRACE CHITTENDEN.

Student of Mathematics, Graduate School, Harvard University, 1890 – 91, and at Königsberg, Prussia, 1891 – 92.

Proctor, Harvard College, 1890–91; Kirkland Fellow, 1891 – 92.

B. S., Worcester Polytechnic, 1888.

A. M., Harvard University, 1890.

"Left for Europe, July 22, 1891. Visited Belgium, the Rhine, (with Captain Cumnock); two weeks' tramp in the Black Forest; four hundred miles on foot through Switzerland; Italian lakes and Milan; the greater part of Germany, including the Hartz Mountains."

WALTER DANIEL CLARK.

"Two years in the Columbia Law School. Passed my examinations for the New York bar in June 1891. Was with Root and Clarke, 32 Nassau St.; and am now managing clerk for Sanger & Davis, Attorneys-at-law, 52 Wall Street, New York city."

COLLIER COBB.

"During the session of 1889–90 I was assistant in geology in Harvard College, and a member of the Graduate Department, president of the Southern Club, which I had helped to organize two years before, and secretary of the Harvard Natural History Society. I was a member of the Graduate Department again in 1890–91.

In 1889 I published a Geography of North Carolina, 8°, New York: A. S. Barnes & Co.; a New School Map of North Carolina, 1 : 7915, 5th ed., Raleigh: A. Williams & Co.; and several newspaper articles and book reviews. Since 1890 I have been instructor in geology in the Mass. Institute of Technology. Last summer I gave a course in geology in the Harvard summer school, and I am lecturer in geology for the current year, at Boston University. I have been for several years an assistant on the U. S. Geological Survey.

Jan. 27th, 1891, I married Miss Mary Lindsey Battle, daughter of Dr. Wm. H. Battle, at Lilesville, N. C. A son, William Battle Cobb, was born to us at Cambridge, Nov. 23d, 1891. We hope that he may enter Harvard early in the 20th century."

PHILIP CODMAN.

Since leaving college has been a student of landscape architecture. Took a postgraduate course in the Lawrence Scientific School, and also in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In June 1891, entered the employ of F. L. Olmsted & Co., landscape architects, Brookline, Mass.

In the summer of 1889 spent three months in the West, and has spent one year travelling in Europe. "Am just starting (March 1892) on a two months' trip to Europe with Mr. Olmsted."

Is a member of the Boston Athletic Association, Puritan Club, Young Men's Democratic Club of Massachusetts, Beverly Yacht Club, and of the Century Club of London.

CHARLES FREDERICK COGSWELL.

"I entered the Harvard Medical School in the fall of 1889, and have since remained there."

CHARLES COPELAND.

"After enjoying a last long vacation I went to Wilmington, Del., where I took the position of inspector—with reference to the Company's right of way—in the chief engineer's office of the Wilmington and Northern R.R. I never had any desire to be a civil engineer, but my next position was transit-man, and now I am assistant road master. I am a member of the Wilmington Club and the Harvard Club of New York."

ANDREW FULLER CRAVEN.

1889–90, Harvard Divinity School. 1890–92, "Have been studying at Johns Hopkins University in the department of history and economics, and have been teaching in private schools in Baltimore."

HARRY BERT CROWL.

"Having made a specialty of chemistry at Harvard, I accepted the position of chemist of the Otis Steel Wks. Lt. at Cleveland, in August 1889. I remained with this Company only a short time, when I became connected with the Joliet Wks. of the Illinois Steel Co., at Joliet, Ill. I was assistant chemist there for a year. I then accepted the position of chief chemist of the Colorado Coal and Iron Co., at Pueblo, Colo. I remained with this company ten months; leaving, at my own request, I became chemist of the Griffin Wheel & Fdg. Co., of Chicago, Ill. I left this Company February last, and am now in business for myself, having established a laboratory in Duluth, Minn.

The immense output of the Mesaba Range, ten miles from here, has attracted a large amount of eastern capital in this direction.

My migrating life of the past three years has been one of experience, and everywhere I have found that 'Harvard' has given me a good foundation both in a business and social way."

RICHARD LANGFORD CURRAN.

1889–90, Germany, studying at Heidelberg and Brunswick. Since September 1890, patent agency and trade journalism in New York city.

CHARLES EMERSON CURRY.

"Together with many classmates, I sailed for Europe (Boston–Liverpool) on the Pavonia, the 6th of July, 1889. After a week's stay in London I crossed over to Germany; the months of August and September I loitered away in Munich and over the Bavarian and Tyrolese Alps. At the beginning of October I left Bavaria and took up my residence in the university town of Göttingen. There I remained two semesters, pursuing my study of mathematics, for which purpose I had come abroad. In Göttingen I heard the following lectures: In the winter semester, "Non-euclidean Geometry" by Prof. Klein, "Theory of Functions" by Prof. Schwarz, and "Theory of Equations" by Dr. Schönflies; in the summer semester, "Non-euclidean Geometry" (continued from winter) and "Linear Differential Equations" by Prof. Klein, and "Theory of Functions" (continued from winter) by Prof. Schwarz. As member of the mathematical Verein of the university, I was enabled to obtain a more accurate insight into the German student life, as well as to gain the many advantages, social and scientific, that such a society always affords.

In the Easter vacation of 1890, I made a five weeks' trip through northern Germany, visiting among other cities Berlin, Leipzig, Dresden, Halle and Cassel. The Pfingsten vacation permitted a ten days' coasting voyage on the Baltic; I boarded a small steamer at Lübeck, which conveyed me to the island Fehmarn, then to the city of Kiel; another vessel then took me along the eastern coast of Denmark, stopping upon its way at the many smaller ports along this most interesting shore. The summer vacation of 1890 I spent partly, together with my brothers and family, in a small country village in the Harz mountains, and partly alone in the higher Tyrolese Alps.

At the advice of my former instructor, Prof. Klein, I studied my second year abroad under Professors Brill and Stahl in Tübingen. The former read in the winter semester "Theory of Elasticity," in the summer semester "Theory of the Curvature of Surfaces." It may not be out of place for me to mention here, that two more carefully studied and interestingly delivered courses of lectures than the above, I have never heard. Prof. Stahl read in the winter semester, "Partial Differential Equations." In addition to these courses, I attended that year a series of lectures by Prof. Waitz on mathematical physics (the theories of electricity, light and heat). At the earnest request of Prof. Brill a mathematical Verein similar to that in Göttingen was founded in Tübingen soon after my arrival.

My second Easter vacation abroad was devoted to a trip through Italy and Sicily; an excursion from Girgenti to the mud volcanoes of Maccalubi, and a three days' sojourn upon the flanks of Ætna were perhaps the only deviations from the generally beaten path of travellers in these countries. The summer vacation of 1891 I devoted chiefly to academic work.

At the end of my second semester in Tübingen, Prof. Brill advised me to go to Prof. Gordon in Erlangen, for a continuation of my studies. Prof. Gordon was so kind as to read during the last winter semester the theory of ternary as well as that of binary forms for only one student. In addition to these courses I heard "algebraic functions" by Prof. Noether, and attended a series of very interesting lectures on Mineralogy, by Prof. Vebbeke. As outside work, I have been busy since Christmas upon a theme proposed me by Prof.

Gordon, and have been devoting this Easter vacation chiefly to its development."

ERIC BERNARD DAHLGREN.

Since leaving college has studied law at Washington, D.C., and travelled in Europe and Greece.

In April 1890, made an address before the Port Royal Society of Naval Veterans of Lowell, Mass., at their quarter centenary, which was published in full in the Lowell papers of that date.

Is a member of the Metropolitan Club of Washington, and of the Washington Harvard Club.

Married, December 11, 1890, Lucy Drexel, daughter of Joseph W. Drexel of New York City. A daughter, Lucy Dahlgren, was born November 10, 1891, at Clarens, Switzerland.

HERBERT HENRY DARLING.

1889–91, Harvard Law School. "Since October 1891, I have been living in Boston, and have been practicing law. I am in the office of John Lowell, Esq., but have no connection with the firm. I am a member of the Harvard Musical Association, rooms, 11 Park Square, Boston.

I left Boston, July 2, 1891, and travelled inland to San Francisco, via Canadian Pacific; stopped a few days at Buffalo, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Seattle, Tacoma, and Portland. Five weeks in San Francisco. Walked from Truckee, Cal., to Yosemite Valley, 310 miles, in company with P. K. Brown, Harvard, '90, carrying provisions and blankets on a pack-horse. Ten days in Lower California,— San Diego and Los Angeles. Returned to Boston via Ogden, Salt Lake City, and Denver; arrived here Oct. 7, 1891."

LL.B., Harvard, 1891.

CHARLES BENEDICT DAVENPORT.

1889–90, student in Graduate School, Harvard University, assistant in zoölogy, and proctor. 1890–91, student in Graduate School, instructor in the Harvard Annex, and proctor. 1891–92, student in Graduate School and instructor in zoölogy. A. M., Harvard, 1890. Member of American Society of Naturalists, and of American Morphological Society.

Has published:

1. "Cristalella: the origin and development of the individual in the colony," with eleven plates. Bull. Mus. Comp. Zoöl. at Harvard College, Vol. XX, No. 4, pp. 101–151, November, 1890.

2. "Preliminary notice on Budding in Bryozoa." Proc. Amer. Acad. Arts & Sci., Vol. XXV, No. 21, pp. 278–282. [Presented Feb. 11, 1891.]

3. "Observations on Budding in Paludicella and some other Bryozoa," with twelve plates. Bull. Mus. Comp. Zoöl. at Harvard College. Vol. XXII, No. 1, pp. 1–114, December 1891.

JOHN TILDEN DAVIS, Jr.

"I travelled for the first year after leaving college, and since then have been in business in St. Louis."

GEORGE LEWIS DEBLOIS.

Since leaving college has been engaged in real estate business with C. U. Cotting, Boston. Is a member of the Boston Athletic Association.

PHILIP DEXTER.

1889–92, Harvard Law School. Is a member of the Somerset Club, and of the Boston Athletic Association.

ROBERT ELKIN NEIL DODGE.

"I was at Harvard two years, studying in the Graduate Department for the degree of A.M., which I took in June 1891. During the past winter, 1891–92, I have been reading and travelling abroad, principally in Italy and the Orient.

I left for Italy in July 1891, and spent the summer travelling in the Low Countries and northern France. In October I entered Italy, where I remained until the end of January, principally in Lombard, Venice, Florence and Rome, dividing my time between sight-seeing and reading the Italian classics. Since the end of January I have been travelling in southern Italy, Sicily, Egypt and Palestine. I shall soon pass on through the Ægean to Constantinople and Greece. I shall pass my summer in northern Italy, and remove in September to Paris for a winter of study.

At present I am loafing about the Orient with my father, and having a splendid time. We have just been down to Jericho, and we fell among thieves with a vengeance, who stripped us of much bakshîsh. I have had a year of delightful leisure, and shall be ready for a little hard work by next September.

I have been a member of the Papyrus Club of Boston, since November 1890, and was its secretary during the following winter and spring. I am also a member of the Mermaid Club of Harvard."

CHARLES DOWNER.

1889–92, Harvard Law School. Is a member of the Puritan Club, and of the Boston Athletic Association.

EDWARD MACOMB DUFF.

1889–91, student at Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge. September 1891, took the position of English master at Belmont School, Belmont, Mass. December 22, 1891, was ordained deacon in the Protestant Episcopal Church at Syracuse, N.Y. Continued at Belmont School until Feb. 1, 1892. After March 1, in mission work in the diocese of Central New York. B.D., Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, 1891. A.M., Hobart College, 1891.

Delivered master's oration at Hobart College commencement, 1891, on "The Humanism of Higher Education."

STILLMAN ROGERS DUNHAM.

"In the Fall of '89 I accepted the position of teacher of English, French, and history, in the Belmont School, Belmont, Mass., Mr. Harding, principal; I remained there until Jan. 1, 1891, when I accepted the offer of private tutor to Mr. S. W. Allerton's son of Chicago. I shall be with the family until next fall, when I shall go into business. I have several offers under consideration, but my mind is not yet made up, and I cannot speak definitely thus early.

Since graduation I have been in every state east of the Mississippi, with the exception of Delaware and North and South Carolina, and in Missouri and Arkansas."

CHARLES BATES DUNLAP.

1889–92, Harvard Medical School.

RANDALL NELSON DURFEE.

1889–91, clerk in Wampanoag Mills, Fall River. Since 1891, book-keeper in office of Stafford Mills, Fall River. Is treasurer of the Church of the Ascension, Fall River, and of the Harvard Club of Fall River. Is a member of the Common Council of Fall River for 1892. Is a member of the Commercial Club, of the Kishmet Social Club, and of the Washington Society of Fall River.

EARNEST WEBSTER DUSTAN.

"The first year after graduation I spent at Yale Divinity School, after which I entered the middle class of the General Theological Seminary (Episcopal) in New York. I am now in the Senior year, and hope to graduate and be ordained in June.

I was married on the 4th of June, 1890, my wife's maiden name being Miss Maria Walker Bartholow, daughter of Dr. Roberts Bartholow, late of the Jefferson Medical School in Philadelphia.

The only degree I have been given is that of B.A., from my Alma Mater. A year ago this month I was elected a member of the Harvard Club of this city. I have taken no active part in politics, nor have I held any office, nor published any book. Since November 22, 1891, I have conducted the services in the churches at Brentwood and Central Islip on Long Island, and at each of the services I have delivered an address. I also conducted a service and gave an address at Bayshore, Long Island, last November.

My journeys since graduation have been limited to short trips by sea or by rail between this city and Massachusetts or Pennsylvania.

It may be of interest to the class to hear that while at Yale I won the challenge loving cup offered in a high-jumping contest (handicap, 1 scratch), open to the whole university. The cup has three handles, and holds two quarts of — champagne. In this contest I had the pleasure of beating out eleven Yale men."

FRANK HENRY EAMES.

Born, at Wilmington, Mass., February 9, 1863.

Died, at Salt Lake City, Utah, November 28, 1890.

The following minute was adopted by the Class Committee :

Frank Henry Eames was born at Wilmington, Mass., February 9, 1863. He attended the public schools of his native town, and in 1882 entered Phillips Academy, Andover, where he was graduated in 1885, third in his class. He made many friends while at Andover, and won the respect of his elders as well as his school-mates by his cheerful courage, his studiousness and his earnest, independent character.

His college life was marked by the same qualities of sturdy faithfulness and religious seriousness, and by lively interests, especially in books and music. He was not widely known in college, but he had warm friends who will miss him from their lives.

Early in 1890 he received an appointment to a clerkship in the office of the Union Pacific Railway at Omaha, Nebraska, from which after some months he was transferred to the office of the Railway at Salt Lake City, where he died on the 28th of November.

His is the first death to take place among the graduates of the class.

FRANKLIN EDDY PARKER,
HERBERT HENRY DARLING,
JAMES GORE KING,
Class Committee.

JAMES HARDY ROPES,
Class Secretary.

FRANCIS GOODRICH EATON.

1889–92, Harvard Law School.

WILLIAM STRUTHERS ELLIS.

"I have studied law since leaving college, attending the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania. Am registered as a law student with John G. Johnson, Esq., of the Philadelphia bar. I have been abroad twice, each time for about three months, travelling through England and over the continent. Have also travelled through Canada.

Am candidate for nomination in the Republican party for office of representative to the Pennsylvania Legislature from Delaware County.

I am a member of the Philadelphia Club, of the Union Club of New York, of the Philadelphia Country Club, and of the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia."

JOHN ENDICOTT.

November 1889 to February 1890, in employ of Union Pacific Railway, at Omaha, Neb. February 1890 to August 1890, passenger agent, U. P. Ry. August 1890, appointed chief clerk in the general agent's office of the U. P. Ry. at Sioux City. January 1, 1891, in addition to the preceding, cashier Pacific Express Co. at Sioux City. June 30, 1891, resigned to take position in the office of Newcomb, Endicott & Co., wholesale and retail dry goods dealers, at Detroit, Mich.

FREDERICK WINTHROP FAXON.

"I have been in the library department of the Boston Book Co. since graduation, and have visited in this connection many of the public and college libraries of the eastern States, but am mostly occupied in the Boston office of the company."

LEO EDWIN FRANK. See Appendix.

ALFRED COPE GARRETT.

"My residence since our graduation has been Cambridge, entered at the Law School, and engaged in study for a Ph.D. in English.

In June 1891 I took the degree of A.M., and immediately after sailed for Europe. Killarney, Shrewsbury, an uncle's country home in Herefordshire, Ilfracombe, Oxford, London, Paris, and Switzerland, are names which give the gist of a short and unambitious, but highly enjoyable trip. We returned about the middle of August. Impressions of the trip are almost too multitudinous to admit of selection. The general inferiority of American civilization, and the baselessness of American 'brag,' presented itself more forcibly than heretofore. 'We are selfish men,' and our life is barren as our taste is poor, considered as an average beside European standards.

During 1890–91, I was captain of the Cricket Team, and we won both our collegiate games,—vs. Haverford College, and (for the first time that a match has been played) vs. Yale at New Haven."

MARCUS LEWIS GERSTLE.

1889–92, Harvard Law School.

"Expect to begin practicing law in San Francisco, Cal., during the coming summer.

Made a European tour, June to September 1889."

CHARLES DAVID GIBBONS.

Since leaving college has lived at Warren, Trumbull County, Ohio. "Was admitted to the bar at Columbus, Ohio, December 3, 1891, and practiced law one month. I am now city editor of the Warren Daily Tribune. I stumped this county during the last campaign, making addresses at places too numerous to mention."

WILLIAM FREDERICK GIESE.

Has not been heard from. Address not known.

HENRY SIMON GLAZIER.

Travelled in Europe after leaving college until the end of December 1890. 1889–90 Graduate School, Harvard. January 1891 took a position with J. & W. Seligman & Co., New York City. A. M., Harvard, 1890. Is a member of the Harvard Club of New York.

JOSEPH LINCOLN GOODALE.

"I spent the summer of '89 in Colorado and Wyoming as field assistant to Mr. S. H. Scudder, who was collecting fossil insects for the Smithsonian. An account of an experience with some supposed desperadoes, which appeared in the Atlantic for November '91, forms my only contribution to literature.

I studied at the Portland Medical School the following winter. In '91 I entered the Second Class at the Harvard Medical School. I am at present a member of the third year at our school, and have been since Feb. 1, 1892, medical externe at the Massachusetts General Hospital."

FREDERICK GREEN.

"The year after graduating from college I spent in teaching. Since then I have attended the Harvard Law School."

WALTER COX GREEN.

"Since leaving college have been studying divinity at Harvard Divinity School, where I expect to graduate in June 1892. After that my address is to be Puyallup, Wash."

CARLETON GREENE.

1889–90, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. 1890–91, studying civil engineering at Mechanicville, N. Y. Summer of 1890, in department of State Engineer and Surveyor, engaged in work on Champlain Canal. Returned to work in September 1891, and has been stationed at various places, present residence being Albany, N. Y.

C. E., Cornell, 1891. Is a member of the Harvard Club of New York.

EDWARD WIGGLESWORTH GREW.

"After graduating I travelled in Europe for five months. Then entered the office of Parkinson & Burr, Bankers and Brokers, where I remained about a year. In December 1890 I left this place and went to Great Falls, Montana, where in company with another man I engaged in a general trading business. In June 1891 I had the opportunity to go into the real-estate business with Mr. J. Morris Meredith in Boston. Since July 1st of that year I have been in the firm of Meredith & Grew, with our office at 15 Congress Street, this city.

I am a member of the Puritan Club, the Boston Athletic Association, and the new University Club."

LEON STACY GRISWOLD.

July '89 to August '91, assistant geologist, Arkansas State Survey, with headquarters at Little Rock, Ark. 1891–92, Graduate School, Harvard, and assistant geologist, U. S. Geological Survey.

"Have made detailed and protracted sojourns in the mountainous region of western central Arkansas. The country is thinly settled as yet, but has good resources and good climate. People hospitable and pious, but need missionaries to preach cleanliness, to teach everything from A, B, C, up, and to illustrate practically the principle that labor will bring some reward."

Has published abstracts of addresses before the American Association for the Advancement of Science on the Novaculities of Arkansas, and the Ouachita Uplift of Arkansas, in Proceedings of the Association for '90 and '91, respectively. Also, "Novaculities" Vol. III, 1890, of Reports of Arkansas Geological Survey.

Is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

BERNARD GOTTLIEB GUNTHER.

February 1890 to April 1891, clerk in the office of Blake Bros. & Co., New York City. Since October 1891, clerk in the office of the Wendel estate, New York City.

"Summer of 1889 made a trip to England, France, Germany, and Austria. A very hurried trip, giving me the impression that America has not the only screeching eagle."

Is a member of the Manhattan Club and of the Harvard Club of New York.

ELSNER CHRISTIAN GUNTHER.

1889–91, Graduate School, Harvard. 1891–92, Harvard Medical School. Travelled in Europe eight weeks after graduation.

PRESCOTT FARNSWORTH HALL.

1889–92, Harvard Law School. "Expect to go into Hon. R. M. Morse's law office September 1, 1892." Travelled in England and Scotland, especially Devon, in the summer of 1889. Is a member of the Brookline Comedy Club.

VICTOR MATHEWS HARDING.

Studied law for six months, then became editor and manager of the Publishers' Commercial Union trade weekly. Since has been connected with the Spokane Spokesman, the Chicago Mail, and the Chicago Evening News, as a reporter. Was abroad in the fall and winter of 1891, visiting England, France, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and the Tyrol.

GILMAN SARGENT HARVEY.

"Did little or nothing for the first year after leaving college except acting as administrator of my father's estate in Gloucester, Mass., and agent in carrying on blacksmith business which he left. In February 1890 entered as a student with Charles A. Russell of Gloucester, attorney-at law."

THOMAS SCHUYLER HATHAWAY.

"After graduation, travelled in England and upon the continent for three months. Upon return entered the office of the Acushnet Mills, New Bedford, where for the last two years I have been learning the manufacture of cotton cloth."

Is a member of the Republican Club of Massachusetts, and the Wamsutta Club of New Bedford, and is 2d Lieutenant in Company E, 1st regiment infantry, M. V. M.

EDWARD WELLES HAWLEY.

"On leaving Harvard, after spending most of my time during five years of college life in the study of Greek and Latin with more or less work in Hebrew and Sanskrit, by virtue of a good offer from a Chicago High School, I, curiously enough, went to teaching nothing but mathematics. This was at the Englewood High School, where I taught for a year and a half, spending the vacations at my home in Minneapolis, or in that immediate vicinity.

During the Christmas holidays of 1890, being dissatisfied with the treatment which the Chicago School Board saw fit to inflict in the matter of salaries upon the teachers in the newly annexed districts, I gave up my position there, and began tutoring three hours a day, getting business practice in the office of my brother, an hydraulic engineer in St. Paul, and attending the evening lectures at the Law School of the Univ. of Minn., with a view to getting a general knowledge of the subject. During the spring term of that year, unable to resist the allurements of base-ball, I accompanied the University "nine" on its eastern trip. The following fall I entered the regular day-class at the Law School, and, except a little time given to tutoring, I have since devoted all my attention to that work.

My nearest approach to publishing anything was through the medium of a short rule for squaring numbers, which I discovered, and after various fruitless efforts to find out whether it was already known, sent it to a mathematical friend for publication. In this way I soon learned that, though it apparently had never been published, it was not entirely unknown to mathematicians, so I refrained from publishing it."

JOHN RUSSELL HAYES.

Since September 1891, in office of William M. Hayes, attorney-at-law, West Chester, Pa. Read a paper on "Harvard, Past and Present," at a public meeting in October 1890. Has published "rhymes in local papers."

"Have taken no part in politics. The evil sway of Quay forbids it."

FRED EMORY HAYNES.

"1889–91, student in history and economics, Harvard University, Graduate Department. At present (April 1892) I am in Cambridge, England, studying economics in the university. I left the United States in September 1891, studied at Berlin during a portion of the first semester, came to Cambridge in January 1892." A. M., Harvard, 1890. Ph.D. (in history) Harvard, 1891, presenting thesis in American history, on "The Struggle for the Constitution in Massachusetts."

ALFRED PARTRIDGE HEBARD. See Appendix.

ARTHUR HENSHAW.

Is living at Cincinnati, Ohio.

CLARENCE ALBERT HIGHT.

1889 to January 1892, Harvard Law School. 1891–92, assistant in English, Harvard College. Since January 1892, clerk in the office of Hon. A. A. Strout, Solicitor Grand Trunk R. R. Admitted to Cumberland bar, State of Maine, at Portland, April 30, 1892.

SAMUEL DAWLEY HILDRETH.

1889–92, Harvard Law School. Admitted to Suffolk bar, February 2, 1892.

EDWARD HOBART.

Since November 1889 with Carver Cotton Gin Co., East Bridgewater, Mass.

ALMON DANFORTH HODGES.

"Since graduation in '89 I have been pursuing the regular course at the Harvard Medical School, Boston. My vacations have been spent partly in the city and partly at various summer resorts. The summer of '91 was spent in an extended tour throughout the New England and Middle Atlantic States, visiting many places of interest as far north as the Canadian end of Lake Champlain, and south as far as Norfolk, Va. Distance travelled was 4,000 miles; by boat and rail 3,000, by carriage 800, on foot 200."

GUY HAROLD HOLLIDAY.

1889–92, Harvard Law School.

ALEXANDER HOLMES.

Since leaving college has been in architectural department of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

JAMES EDWARD HOMANS.

"Since leaving college have been at Harvard Divinity School two years, but finding myself scarcely as yet qualified for the ministry and being unable to continue study with no definite aim, left and began literary work. July 1891 went into publishing business in New York City, working on University Magazine, 70 South St., N.Y.

I am a member of the Harvard Club of New York, and also of several small quasi-religious and social organizations.

Beyond meagre contributions to several newspapers and magazines have done no literary work, published as yet. Am writing several books."

LOUIS LEVERETT HOOPER.

"For the first two years after graduation, I held the position of Assistant in Physics in the College; I am at present teaching physics and chemistry in the Cathedral School of St. Paul, Garden City, L. I."

GURDON SALTONSTALL HOWE.

1889–92, Harvard Law School. Admitted to the Suffolk bar, December 1891. Since March 1, 1892, in the office of Gaston & Whitney, Boston.

Is a member of the Puritan Club.

MORTON DENISON HULL.

1889–92, Harvard Law School.

LINCOLN HULLEY.

"Since leaving Harvard I have tutored one summer, studied Hebrew and Old Testament literature in Harper's Summer School of Sacred Literature at Chautauqua, held a chair in science in Bucknell University three years, and preached for the Temple Baptist Church of Philadelphia one year. I was ordained for the work of the ministry in the Baptist denomination, March 1890. I was married in June 1890, to Miss Harriet E. Spratt, at her home, Coatesville, Pa. In 1891, Bucknell University conferred on me the degree of Master of Arts."

CARLETON HUNNEMAN.

"My life for the last three years has been uneventful and its narration would be uninteresting. To me, however, it has been very attractive, more so, perhaps than the four years of college life that are beginning to grow dim in the distance. I have been plodding my way steadily through the Harvard Law School, living in my old room in Thayer, and watching my small circle of friends at Cambridge grow smaller, as one after another found an opportunity for his talents in other fields. I expect to graduate from the Law School next June.

For the last two summers I have played the part of mentor for three boys, at a small town on the shore south of Boston. I hope I did them some good. I am sure they did me.

Last February I was admitted to the Boston Bar, and in the near future I shall probably settle down and practice in Boston."

GEORGE LELAND HUNTER.

"I have been engaged in private tutoring in Chicago until February 15, 1892, when I was requested to join the staff of the Chicago Tribune.

The responsibility thrust upon an inexperienced man was something tremendous. My fixed hours of work were from 8 P.M. until 2 A.M. Besides that I had my editorials to write and foreign papers to read. During the period I held the position of Foreign Editor of the Tribune (the department was new, foreign news was previously handled by the regular telegraph editors) I had no desire to read a line outside of matters bearing directly on my work. The strain was severe. A recent cut down in the force for economic reasons has left me more at leisure. I am not sure that I have the audacity again to plunge into the maelstrom of journalistic life."

Has made various trips through the west.

Is a member of the Sunset Club and of the Harvard Club of Chicago, and of the American Dialect Society.

FRANKLIN ELIAS HUNTRESS.

Since leaving college has been sales-agent for the American Steel Car Wheel Co., and the Wrought Iron Casting Co., of Boston. "I am a member of the Somerville Republican ward and city committee, and of the common council of Somerville, and have been considerably interested since leaving college in local and state politics. I have attended as a delegate several Republican conventions, and was present at the last state convention (1891) in such capacity."

Is a Mason and Odd Fellow; a member of the Massachusetts Republican Club, and secretary of the Somerville Republican Club.

WALTER PERKINS HUTCHINSON.

"I travelled quite extensively in New England during the summer at the close of my college days, and there met some of the old class. I then resided in Hartford, Ct., taking up work in the Theological Seminary preparatory for the ministry. The year was uneventful, being spent very little in work but mostly in society.

Early in May, I started on a trip to the Pacific slope, travelling when west of Chicago on the Union Pacific, and thus passing through a very picturesque and varied country.

For five months I resided in Seattle, Washington, and returned late in the fall of '90. I completed the circuit of the Northern Pacific with the Union Pacific.

After nearly six months' absence I again returned to Hartford Theological Seminary. Yet I was not destined to remain there long. After four months I left Connecticut to complete my course at Andover, Mass, where I have since resided. I graduate in June, 1892."

FREDERICK BOYDEN JACOBS.

"I have been in the Harvard Law School for the past three years. Two of my summers I have spent in the law office of the Hon. George S. Hale. I was last March elected for three years a member of the School Board of Norwell."

Is permanent secretary of Law School Class of '92.

EDWARD LINCOLN JELLINEK.

"I spent the summer of 1889 in and about Buffalo, in anticipation of returning to Cambridge and entering the Law School. Death in my immediate family upset my plans. In October 1889, I entered the law-office of Shire & Van Peyma, in Buffalo, as a student, and soon became managing clerk of their office. I took the bar examination at the October '91 General Term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, in and for the Fifth Department, at Rochester, and was admitted to practise as an attorney and counsellor-at-law by the Board of Examiners. I received the empty honor of being elected president of the class which was admitted at that time.

On the 1st of January, 1892, I became a member of the firm in whose office I read law, the firm name or style being changed to that of Shire, Van Peyma & Jellinek.

I have devoted the past three years quite exclusively to my professional work. While I have taken a keen and active interest in the political movements which tend to purify the civil service and municipal affairs hereabout, my office-holding experience has been limited to service as a delegate to nominating conventions.

I am a member of the Phœnix Club, one of the prominent social organizations of Buffalo, of the Association of the Bar, of the Buffalo Library, of the Civil Service Reform Association, and of several minor literary and charitable societies."

WALTER LOUIS JENNINGS.

1889–92, in Graduate School, Harvard, studying for a Ph.D. in chemistry. Assistant in organic chemistry, 1889–90, and in qualitative analysis, 1890–92. Conducted courses in chemistry in the Harvard summer school of 1890 and 1891. A. M., Harvard, 1890. In August and September 1891 travelled through Holland, Germany, Switzerland, and France.

HERBERT PARLIN JOHNSON.

"The three years since graduation I have spent in preparing myself to teach biology, and to advance knowledge in that department. To this end, I have studied and carried on investigations in zoölogy at Harvard, Williams College, and Clark University. My career has therefore been uneventful. During the year at Harvard (1889–90) I worked in Dr. Mark's laboratory, and served as assistant in zoölogy (for the Annex) and also as assistant in botany for the college. At the end of this year I received the degree of A. M.

The following year I was assistant in biology at Williams College, teaching zoölogy in the laboratory, lecturing, etc. I spent a large part of last summer at the Marine Biological Laboratory, Woods Holl, Mass., where I continued my research work.

In September 1891 I received an appointment as Fellow in morphology at Clark University, and have since been in attendance here. I have published a short paper on 'Amitosis in the Embryonal Membranes of the Scorpion' in the Bulletin of the Museum of Comp. Zoölogy at Harvard College (Vol. XXII. No. 3, with three plates). This appeared in January 1892. Somewhat extended investigations on the structure and life history of a group of Infusoria will be published soon in the Journal of Morphology.

I have become a member of the Society of American Naturalists and of the Corporation of the Marine Biological Laboratory."

OLIN COIT JOLINE.

"In the fall of '89 I accepted the position of First Assistant Master in the Yeates Institute, Lancaster, Penn. I occupied that position two years, during which time I was engaged in teaching college preparatory subjects, — Greek, Latin, and physics.

In August 1891 I accepted the position of Classical Master in this 'The Cathedral School of St. Paul,' Garden City, Long Island, N. Y. In my present position I have complete control of the Greek department, and I also have the fifth and sixth forms in Latin, so that I am directly responsible for a boy's classical preparation for college.

This school is the one founded by Mrs. A. T. Stewart, and is now backed by the Stewart estate. There are seventeen masters and instructors, and about 110 boys. The military system of discipline is used."

HENRY THEODORE KELLOGG.

1889–92, Harvard Law School. "Next year I shall be in Plattsburgh, N. Y., endeavoring to work up a country practice."

GEORGE THOMAS KEYES.

1889–90, in Boston. Since January 1891, with Fairchild Paper Co., East Pepperell, Mass.

MOSES DAY KIMBALL.

"Began study of law in October 1889 in the Harvard Law School. Hope to enter practice during 1892. Spent three months in the summer of 1891 in R. M. Morse's office, Boston." Is a member of the Union Club and Puritan Club of Boston.

Is commencement speaker from the Harvard Law School, 1892.

JAMES GORE KING.

1889–92, Harvard Law School. Is a member of the Harvard Club of New York.

EDWARD NAPOLEON KIRBY.

"Continued to teach at Harvard Divinity School and in the New Church School till end of 1890. Then accepted the chair of "Snow Professor of Elocution and Oratory," Boston University.

My professional and married life began before entering Harvard College, entering the ministry in 1876 and beginning teaching in 1881, in connection therewith, I continued in these professions during my college life.

I was married to Lillian Alice Lautz of Rockland, Mass., daughter of David J. Lautz, June 7, 1883. As a result of this union Paul Lautz was born at Rockland, May 20, 1885; Edward Thomas, Cambridge, Nov. 2, 1886; Ruth Mary, Rockland, June 16, 1888; Elizabeth, Cambridge, Jan. 6, 1892."

ARNOLD HERMAN KNAPP.

"Since graduation I have been studying medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in this city, and in the summer of 1890 at Edinburgh University, Scotland."

FRANK EDWIN LANE.

Since September 1889 has been engaged in private tutoring in Syracuse, N. Y., and Boston, Mass.

HENRY BURROWES LATHROP.

"After commencement-day I dragged out several long weeks in Cambridge, wondering when the Trustees of some half-dozen colleges would determine on my applications to be invited to teach subjects for them, and accepted about the only appointment I had not applied for (I should have applied for that if I had heard of it), the place of Assistant Professor of the English Language and Literature at Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y. At the end of a year I came back to take a position as instructor in English at Harvard, where I have been ever since.

I was married in Philadelphia, June 27, 1890, to Miss Mary Agnes Stinson of Oakland, Cal., daughter of John Harrison Stinson.

My one club has been the Fortnightly Club at Geneva, a social and literary organization, and my part in politics has been confined to talking vehemently, usually at breakfast, and to voting in two municipal elections, once I believe illegally."

Has been appointed assistant professor of English at Leland Stanford, Jr., University, Palo Alto, Cal.

GEORGE DIMMICK LATIMER.

"After graduation I entered, or rather returned, to the Divinity School, where I remained until March 1, 1890, when I was installed as pastor of Unity Church, Allston, where I am still settled.

In the summer of 1890 I spent two months in Europe, visiting France, Holland, Germany, and Italy.

I am happy and useful in a small field of work."

WILLIAM JACK LATTA.

"In October 1891 I came to Chicago and entered the grain commission office of Chas. Counselman & Co., where I spent a year learning that business. At the end of my apprenticeship I did not feel sufficiently enthusiastic over the business to make much effort to attempt it alone. A friend of my father proposed that I enter on the manufacturing of stained glass windows, and showed me where there was an opening. I took an expert book-keeper, and went into the firm's office for a month, — only to find them on the verge of failure. I then opened up negotiations with the banker, A. S. Kean, to find him in much the same apparent condition. He failed for $300,000 inside of two months.

By this time I was thoroughly impressed with the idea that Chicago was hardly the sound business place I was looking for. I had long believed — as I do yet — that the country grain elevator business was a good one. An opportunity offered itself in this direction about this time, and November 1, 1890, found me at Fremont, Neb., looking into the firm of Nye, Schneider & Co., the largest grain firm in the state. With a jolly party, a private car, and an engine we ran over nearly the whole state, looking at elevators owned by this firm, one of our trips running up to the Black Hills, where the Indian troubles were well under way and the air full of interesting rumors and anticipations. We returned to Fremont about the 15th of December, found the books and accounts satisfactory, but could not agree on a price for the stock. Came back to Chicago just before Christmas, and spent January and February '91 in looking for an opening.

The first of March found me again on the Board of Trade, a full partner of the firm Rumsey & Latta. My partner was a man than whom none stood higher in his line in Chicago, 55 years of age, and a successful member of the Board for 30 years. We took what I consider the best office in the Board of Trade building, and started in and did business on a large scale from the jump. The firm lasted just one year. For although we did a very remarkable business for a new house,— amounting to over one million dollars in actual grain handled, alone, not considering the option, — our expenses were so great that the net hardly amounted to one per cent. This was just one quarter of what we had expected, so, as I had that privilege, at the end of the year I withdrew. My partner and I never had the least friction or unpleasantness whatever, but my advice would be never to hitch a well-bred colt up with an old family buggy horse.

I am now looking after my father's real estate here, and waiting "for something to turn up."

I belong to the Union League Club of Chicago."

ROBERT GREENLEAF LEAVITT.

After graduation until February 1890, Graduate School, Harvard. February 1890 to June 1891, teaching at De Veaux School, Suspension Bridge, N. Y. 1891–92, at Concord Home School, Concord, Mass.

Married December 26, 1890, Janet Shumway, daughter of William T. Shumway of Webster, Mass.

GEORGE WINTHROP LEE.

"Two years at Law School. Went into electricity this year with Germania Electric Co., at Marlborough, Mass."

WILLIAM ASA LEFAVOUR.

"About six weeks after graduation my eyes suddenly gave out, and have continued weak ever since. While they are now somewhat improved they are still too weak to allow of my entering upon any definite line of work. I have been living at home at Beverly, Mass."

FREDERICK BREED LORD.

1889–92, Harvard Law School.

CHARLES WASHINGTON LUCK.

1889–90, minister, Congregational Church, Topsfield, Mass. 1890–92, minister, Congregational Church, Pocatello, Idaho. Ordained to the Congregational ministry at Topsfield, Mass., June 27, 1887.

"A year after graduation, I moved west. With my own hands I cleared away the sage-brush and built me a house. I am only a plain home missionary, working under the direction of the American Home Missionary Society. I am so far from my old friends in the populous East that my life is of little interest except to the few about me. But I am helping to lay the foundation of a new State."

Married April 27, 1882, at Marion, Mass., Adella Matilda Luce, daughter of George L. Luce of Marion. Has children, Charles Arthur, born at Marion, Mass., February 28, 1883, George Luce, born at Brownfield, Me., August 12, 1886, and Margery, born at Topsfield, Mass., September 29, 1889.

PHILIP MESIER LYDIG.

See Appendix.

CHARLES CHRISTOPHER McGEHEE.

"During the latter part of July, 1889, about one month after leaving Harvard, I connected myself with the Trader's Bank of Atlanta, Ga., of which institution my Father was the President. My connection with the bank was understood to be only temporary, so during the month of October following I received an appointment as Private Secretary to Mr. Joel Hurt, Sec. of the Atlanta Home Insurance Co. I remained in this capacity until August 1890, at which time I was given a trial in the capacity of Special Agent of the same Company. Having shown myself capable of attending to this branch of the Company's business, I soon became the regular appointee, which position I have held ever since.

During January 1891, I made a trip through the State of Tennessee with a view of entering my Company for business. Finding the field to be an inviting one, I carried out my purpose, and since that time have further extended my territory by planting agencies throughout the State of North Carolina.

My territory now consists of Georgia, Tennessee, and North Carolina. My duties cover the management and superintendence of agencies and the adjustment of losses.

I have never married, and have resided at my present home, Atlanta, Ga., ever since leaving the halls of my Alma Mater.

Before entering Harvard I had the honor of taking the degree of Ph.B. at the University of Georgia, located at Athens, Ga., and receiving distinction in ancient languages.

I am a member of the American Statistical Association, American Academy of Social and Political Sciences, and locally, of several social Clubs, dancing and otherwise.

My duties of late have become so onerous and exacting as to require my absence away from home quite a large part of my time. As a result, I have been somewhat withdrawn from the social vortex, for which a Harvard education so admirably adapts one."

WALTER WISE MACKAY.

"I have been at Vermilye & Co., bankers, New York City, and a member of the New York stock exchange, since graduation, and have lived in winter in New York City, in summer in Englewood, N. J. I passed the summer of 1889 in England and on the Continent, likewise the summer of 1891."

Is a member of the Calumet, Racquet, and Harvard Clubs of New York, and of the Englewood Club of Englewood.

WALTER WARREN MAGEE.

Since leaving college has been in Syracuse, N. Y., reading and practicing law. Since November 1891, has been a member of the firm of Wandell & Magee, Syracuse, N. Y. Made five speeches in the New York state campaign, October 1891. Is a member of the Young Men's Republican Club, the Citizen's Club, and the Players' Club of Syracuse.

GEORGE HOPE MAIRS.

See Appendix.

JAMES THOMAS MALONE.

Since leaving college has studied law in the office of Billings & Cardozo, 120 Broadway, N. Y. Was admitted to the bar of New York, March 26, 1892. "I have delivered a few political speeches under the auspices of the Democratic organization in New York."

GEORGE SNELL MANDELL.

See Appendix.

SAMUEL CONY MANLEY.

"In November 1889, I went into the General Manager's office of the Maine Central Railroad, Portland, Maine, and have been there ever since.

Have taken no active part in politics, other than attending caucuses, voting, and joining the Blaine Republican Club of Augusta, and the Young Men's Republican Club of Portland.

Have written a number of articles on various subjects for various local papers."

MILTON MOZART MARBLE.

Since September 1889, instructor in chemistry and physics, Hillhouse High School, New Haven, Conn.

LEWIS HENRY MORGAN.

See appendix.

WALTER W. NAUMBURG.

"I travelled in Europe for about four months after graduating." Since October 1889 with Naumburg, Kraus, Lauer & Co., New York. Is a member of the Reform Club and the Harvard Club of New York.

JAMES MONTGOMERY NEWELL.

"I passed the summer of 1889 travelling in England and Scotland. I visited several of the cathedral towns and went into Devonshire, which I thought the most picturesque part of England which I had seen. England as a whole is a most delightful place in the way of scenery. I spent three days in Paris and just before sailing for home took a flying trip through North Wales.

In the autumn I entered the Harvard Law School. I found the work extremely interesting but so hard that at the end of the year I was decidedly hors de combat, and passed the summer in a vain effort to get well again.

January 14, 1890, I sailed for Europe and joined some relatives who were passing the winter on the Riviera. I visited Rome, Florence, Pisa, and Genoa, all of which I found most interesting. On my way north I stayed some time in Paris, from which I made trips to several of the neighboring cities. I then passed three weeks in London, with short trips to the country. I reached Boston early in June. In the fall of 1891 I returned to the Law School, entering the second year class, and have done nothing but slave over law books since."

JOSEPH NICKERSON.

1889–90, Harvard Divinity School. Is now at the Adirondacks, where he has been living for the year past on account of his health.

ALBERT AUGUST WILLIAM NIEDERMANN.

"During the last three years my work has been of rather a desultory kind; sometimes I have gone in on my own hook and sometimes for others, in a considerable variety of goods, — land, iron, paper, and sulphite." Lives in Milwaukee, Wis.

JOHN PERCY NIELDS. See Appendix.

GEORGE H. NORMAN, Jr.

Since leaving college has been with F. H. Prince & Co., bankers, Boston.

WILLIAM RICE ODELL.

"Two years (1889–91) at Harvard Law School. Since then in the law office of Willits, Robbins & Case, Chicago. Admitted to the bar in October 1891."

SAMSON DAVID OPPENHEIM.

Since leaving college has been engaged in editorial work in Philadelphia on the New York Recorder.

Married in New York City, June 11, 1889, Laura Levy, daughter of Julius Levy of New York. Has a son, Laurence David Oppenheim, born in New York, November 30, 1890.

HENRY WINSOR PACKARD.

February 1890 to March 1892, clerk in office of Arkwright Insurance Co., Boston. Since April 1892, has been studying music in Salem, with especial reference to the organ and church music.

GEORGE BLAIR PAINTER.

Since October 1889 with the J. Painter & Sons Co., iron manufacturers, Pittsburg, Pa.

FRANKLIN EDDY PARKER.

"On graduating from college in June, I travelled in Europe for three months, visiting England, Scotland, and the Continent. Returning in September, I entered the Harvard Law School with a view to learning the rudiments of railway law. In January 1889 I entered the employ of the Montana Union Railway Co. (a branch of the Union Pacific system) at Butte City, Mont. Here I went through the various stages of local and general-office work, and gained a good idea of the railway business in general.

In February 1891 I was made chief clerk in the General Agent's office of the Union Pacific at Butte City, Mont. Here I remained until August 13, when I became Commercial Agent of the Flint and Père Marquette Railroad at Bay City, Mich. This was a jump of over two thousand miles nearer home, and was due to my pleasant relations with Mr. W. H. Baldwin, a Harvard '84 man, with whom I had been associated at Butte City, Mont.; he having been General Manager of the Montana Union Railway, and afterwards going to Michigan as General Manager of the Flint and Père Marquette Railroad. I am at present located at Bay City, Mich., in the capacity of Commercial Agent, studying the complicated questions of railway traffic, which, although often vexatious, are extremely interesting.

I was married in Salt Lake City on March 23, 1892, to Mary Beecher Bishop, daughter of the late Dr. A. C. Bishop, of Butte City, Mont.

Since leaving college I have become a member of the Silver Bow Club of Butte, Mont., also of the Bay City Club of Bay City, Mich.

I have found no time to take any part in politics except as they have touched railroad matters, and have written only a few articles on railway traffic, which have been published in the daily papers.

My life has been a very active one, and my occupation has caused me to travel extensively in the West and North-west, while my present territory is the Great Lake region, with which I am becoming thoroughly familiar.

Railroading is a great occupation; the field for energy, brains, and pluck is tremendous, while there is added the infinite variety of a constant change of situation, which no other business affords. It is a science and a study well worth the attention of our college men of to-day."

LASELL ELLISON PARTRIDGE.

1889–92, Harvard Law School.

WESLEY PAUL.

1889–90, Ozias Goodwin Fellow, Graduate School, Harvard.
1890–92, Harvard Law School.

WILLIAM HESSELTINE PEAR.

Married, Oct. 22, 1890, at Cambridge, Mass., Fannie Carlton Bradley, daughter of Mrs. J. W. Bradley of Cambridge.

GARDNER PERRY.

"In July '89, I left here for a trip abroad. Studied German in Leipzig for about eight months, and attended the University at that place. Afterwards travelled through Turkey, Greece, Egypt, Italy, Spain, France, etc. Returned home after a trip of 16 months, and entered the Law School."

1890–92, Harvard Law School.

JOHN SAMUEL PHELPS.

1889–92, Harvard Medical School.

WILLIAM FORREST PILLSBURY.

1889–91, Harvard Law School. September to November 1891, assistant in office of general solicitor C. & N. P. R. R. Co. Since December 1, 1891, lawyer at 81 Adams Express Building, Chicago. A.M. Harvard, 1891. Is a member of the Harvard Club of Chicago.

ALFRED CLAGHORN POTTER.

"Immediately after graduation, I entered the Harvard College Library as an assistant, and have remained there ever since. My only publication has been: A bibliography of Beaumont and Fletcher. Cambridge: 1890. (Bibliographical contributions of the Library of Harvard University, No. 39.) I have made no journeys of note except a yachting trip along the Maine coast in the summer of 1890, and a trip to Cape Breton in '91. Am a member of the Colonial Club of Cambridge."

OLIVER PRESCOTT, Jr.

"Went to Europe in July 1889, returning in October of same year. Was much impressed with the dangers of Alpine climbing, and determined never to risk my precious neck again. Also impressed by the number of Harvard men to be met with in travelling through Europe." 1889–92, Harvard Law School.

Is secretary and treasurer of the trustees of the Arnold Charity Fund Corporation, New Bedford. Is a member of the Puritan Club, Boston, and of the Wamsutta Club, New Bedford.

JAMES DWIGHT PRINDLE, Jr.

Since leaving college has been a student in the Graduate School, Harvard (until June 1891), and at Madrid, Spain, at Universidad Central de Madrid, studying the Spanish language and literature. A.M., Harvard, 1891.

JAMES HOWE PROCTOR.

WILLIAM GIBBONS RANTOUL.

Since August 1889, with Andrews, Jacques & Rantoul, architects, Boston. Is a member of the Puritan Club.

FREDERICK OLIN RAYMOND, Jr.

"Since leaving college in June 1889, I have resided continually in Haverhill, Mass., and have been connected with the shoe manufacturing business. In November of the same year I entered the employ of Gardner Bros., shoe manufacturers. In April 1890, the the firm was changed to Gardner, Thomas & Co., under which name the business was conducted until August 1891, when the senior member of the firm bought out the interests of his partners, and again changed the firm name to S. P. Gardner. I have remained with the house during these changes, and am still connected with it.

I am a member of the Pentucket Club, a social club for men, of the Forty Club, a literary and social organization, of the Young People's Entertainment Society, a dramatic and social society, of the Altogether Club, a literary society connected with the First Parish (Unitarian) Society, and of the Haverhill Athletic Association."

GEORGE REISNER.

[Formerly wrote his name George Andrew Reisner.]

1889–90, at Indianapolis, Ind., studying law with Senator MacDonald. 1890–91, graduate student in Semitic languages and history at Harvard. 1891–92, assistant in Semitic languages at Harvard. A.M., Harvard, 1891. Is a member of the Century Club of Indianapolis, and of the American Oriental Society. Published an article on the "Construct Case in Assyrian," in Proceedings of the American Oriental Society for October 1891.

PHILIP MURRAY REYNOLDS.

"After graduating, attended the electrical course at the M. I. T., for one year, and then entered the shops of the Thomson–Houston Co. Spent a year in the West and am now settled in Boston."

CHARLES AVERELL RICH.

"I have been a graduate student and assistant in the Jefferson Physical Laboratory since graduation. I was abroad during the summer of 1890."

WILLIAM FRANCIS RICHARDS.

"A few days after graduating I sailed for Europe, where I spent a year in travelling back and forth across the Continent, recuperating, enjoying myself, and picking up a little of the foreign languages. I got back to my native town of Newport, N. H., about the middle of the summer of 1890. I was rather expecting to get a place in a Boston wool house, and while waiting my chance I was initiated a little into the mysteries of the woolen manufacturing business, which was my father's business. My expectations of the wool business did not materialize, so that I dropped the wool for the dry goods jobbing business. In November 1890, I secured a very lucrative and enjoyable position in the basement of a large jobbing house in Boston, which position I held for five months — long enough to convince me that the country was not such a bad place to live in after all, and that to be one of the firm in a manufacturing business was preferable to acting as sweeper and errand boy to an excellent jobbing house. In the spring of 1891 I came home, and soon was admitted to the firm of Dexter Richards & Sons, flannel manufacturers."

MARK WYMAN RICHARDSON.

"July 1889 to July 1890, abroad. Time spent in travel on the Continent and in England and Scotland, and in study of languages and music. Since September 1890 have been at Harvard Medical School." Is a member of the Puritan Club.

JAMES HARDY ROPES.

"Immediately after Commencement, 1889, I went to the Crazy Mountains, Montana, as geological assistant to Dr. J. E. Wolff. After spending two months in the Crazy Mountains, and two months with the U. S. Geological Survey party in the Yellowstone Park, I made a journey to the Pacific coast, returning home before Christmas. The spring of 1890 I stayed in Andover, and spent my time largely in issuing the first Secretary's Report. In September 1890, I entered Andover Theological Seminary, where I have now been studying for two years.

The summers of 1890 and 1891 I spent partly in work as assistant geologist on the U. S. Geological Survey, working under Prof. Shaler, in Maine and New Hampshire."

IRVING AUGUSTUS RULAND.

ELMER LINDBERG WENGREN.

"After leaving college spent a year abroad, in which I became an admirer of old country art and of new world independence." Since returning has been clerk in lumber mill at Megantic, P. Q., and clerk in First National Bank, Portland, Me.

CHARLES DELEVAN WETMORE.

1889–92, Harvard Law School. Travelled in England, Ireland, Scotland, and on the Continent in the summer of 1889.

HENRY RUSSELL WHITE.

"Returned to college in October 1889 for post-graduate course in chemistry, receiving degree of A. M. at close of year, June 1890.

In November accepted a position as Master of Grammar School at Harwich, changed to Orleans in March 1891, and in February 1892 accepted place of Master of High School at Nahant, Mass., where I am at present located."

JAMES EDWARD WHITNEY, Jr.

Is clerk in the office of James E. Whitney, importer of East India merchandise, 13 Doane St., Boston. Travelled in England, Scotland, and Ireland in the summer of 1890. In March 1891 visited Yucatan.

MORRIS WHITRIDGE.

"Since leaving Cambridge in June '89 I have been living in 'Maryland my Maryland.' I first tried my hand at the banking and brokerage business with my father, and, Micawber-like, waited for something (permanent) to turn up for over a year; since 1890 (December) I have been with the same firm. There has been little change in me. My business keeps me pretty well confined to my desk, and here in Baltimore with none of my classmates living in the immediate vicinity, I hear very little about the men of '89 although my interest in old Harvard '89 grows deeper and stronger year by year. I still take the Crimson, and no paper is read with more interest by me than that sheet, mirabile dictu. Three years have made little change in my personal appearance, perhaps a little balder, or with signs of approaching baldness, and I sometimes think I am growing a little stouter, which all old '89 friends will no doubt consider an improvement in my appearance.

In this Princeton town of Baltimore we still manage to gather around the board once a year to sing the songs of old Harvard with a small but chosen band of her sons. I still have the honor of being the 'baby' of the club. With a younger brother now at Cambridge, I shall hope to yield this title to him before long, and the pleasure, also, of making the baby's after-dinner speech.

And now, my dear Ropes, I think I can sum up in a nutshell by saying I am in good health, that the world has treated me well since I left Cambridge, and excepting the one great sorrow in the death of my mother, I have been most fortunate, and close this very personal sketch by saying God bless old '89 and her sons."

RAYMOND SARGENT WILDER.

1889–92, Harvard Medical School.

MAX WINKLER.

"In the year 1889 I was appointed assistant professor of French and German at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan. In the spring of 1890 I was called to the University of Michigan as instructor of German, a position which I still hold. I shall probably take my Ph.D. degree at the University of Michigan this coming May.

I have written several articles on Harvard for the college publications of the institutions with which I have been connected, and have made several public addresses in Lawrence and Ann Arbor."

THORNTON WOODBURY.

"After graduation I spent a year in travelling, visiting all the principal cities of Europe, and spending the winter of 1889–90 in Egypt. I went up the Nile to Philae, at the first cataract, and spent a couple of months in Cairo. Upon my return to this country I went up to Manchester, N. H., and went into the Amoskeag Cotton Mill to learn the manufacturing business. I had not been there but two months when I was taken down with typhoid fever, and but for a fortunate removal to the Massachusetts General Hospital this history would have ended at this point. I was in hospital three months, and was very much broken in health when I got out. In April 1891 I found myself once more able to do some work and came out to the Harvard Law School, where I have been since. In April of 1892 I am going abroad once more for a two months' trip in England and Germany, and in July I hope to take an opportunity which has been offered me in Senator Wolcott's office in Denver, Col., as law clerk. I expect to make Denver, Col., my home, and look forward to being admitted to the bar in the fall. I am a Master Mason and have taken sixteen degrees in the Scottish Rite."

GEORGE ELLIOT WRIGHT.

1889–92, Harvard Law School.

"I spent the summer of 1891 travelling in the West, with which I was favorably impressed.

FRANK EDWARD ZINKEISEN.

1889–90, Graduate School, Harvard. 1890–92, student at the University of Berlin.

"I have seen the greater part of Germany during my residence here. I find the tourist the most depressing feature in the landscape." A. M., Harvard, 1890. Is a member of the Historical Society of the University of Berlin.

Non-Graduates and Special Students.

PHILIP STANLEY ABBOT.

"I took my A.B. in 1890, and have been in the Law School ever since — convinced, each successive year, that I never knew before what it was to be busy. In the spring of 1890 my family settled permanently in Cambridge, so that my arc of vibration is a very short one, between Austin Hall and 1 Follen St. and back.

I have published nothing, except a great many editorials in the Monthly, to which I still cling like a barnacle, — the only member left on the Board who can remember Houghton and the Pessimists.

The summer of 1890 I spent in Europe, partly doing the conventional round, but also snatching three weeks for Norway. It is the ideal country for a tramp — every prospect pleases, and man is not vile. Even the beaten track is unspoilt, and when one gets off of that, one plunges into the heart of a glorious wilderness of mountains and glaciers, where one shakes off even the travelling Englishman.

I am a member of the Union Club of Boston."

ALEXANDER FRANCIS ADAMS.

Since August 1886, book-keeper with C. F. Edson & Co., Lynn Also musician and teacher of banjo, mandolin and guitar. Is a member of Imp. O. R. M.; D. of P. (I. O. R. M.); Lynn Banjo, Mandolin, and Guitar Club, and P. F. Y. B. O.

SETH BEALE. See Appendix.

IRA MACK BEAMAN.

"In the summer of 1886 I was allured into the field of practical business, and came to try journalism at Theresa, New York, where I established the Theresa Sentinel, for Jas. W. Van Slyke, of Antwerp, N.Y.; from Theresa, one year later, I went to Carthage, N.Y., to become local editor of the Carthage Republican, and during the campaign of 1888 had full control over its columns as editorial writer, Mr. L. G. Chase, the proprietor, as chairman of the Republican County Committee of Jefferson County, devoting his time to the work of the Committee. In the fall of 1888 I returned to my native town to take full charge of its local paper. January 1890, entered into a partnership with Albert Ellis Hoyt, '89, Cornell, in publishing the Westborough, Mass., Tribune, of which in 1891 I became sole proprietor, consolidating it with the Westborough Chronotype, which I also gained control of at that time, on July 4th.

On Thursday, Dec. 31, 1891, occurred my marriage to Marion Josephine, daughter of Hon. John D. Ellis, at Antwerp, New York.

I am an Odd Fellow, and have taken the first two steps in the order of A. F. and A. M.

While at Antwerp, N. Y., during 1889, was elected to the office of Town Clerk, as a republican, the democratic ticket containing no name of an opposing candidate.

Though a member of the class and college but one year, I am an enthusiastic supporter of all means or methods to promote the welfare of Harvard, and can point out three men, at least, whom I think I have induced to enter its classes. Two are now in Cambridge."

WILLIAM SHEPHERD BEAUMONT.

Is a physician at 19 Dartmouth Street, Boston. M.D., Harvard, 1890. Is a member of State Board of Health Association, appointed April 1891. Was house officer at Carney Hospital, 1888–89. WALTER COULSON.

"After leaving college in 1888 I started upon my law studies and continued at them for eighteen months, when I was admitted to the bar. My law studies were pursued partly in the Boston University Law School, and partly in Lawrence in the office of Mr. Charles A. DeCourcy, my present partner. My life has been uneventful since I began practice. Mr. DeCourcy's practice was large and well established when I became associated with him, so that I immediately became engrossed with business cares and have had time to attend to nothing since but law practice. Our practice is general and miscellaneous, and I need only add that I have been very successful thus far in all my efforts."

NEWTON CRANE.

Until January 1, 1892, experimenter in fire alarm telegraph apparatus. Is now treasurer of Municipal Fire and Police Telegraph Co. Lives at Newton Highlands.

Married April 23, 1892, Lucie Allen Harlow of Newton Centre.

JOSEPH BALLARD CROCKER.

"I left college about the middle of the junior year on account of an illness which made me useless for two years or more. I spent this period trying to recover my health, taking several journeys both South and West to accomplish my object. In January 1890 my health had improved so that I went to work for the Martin Cash Carrier Co., 89 State St., Boston, a corporation engaged in the manufacture and sale of an apparatus for carrying cash in stores from the salesman to the cashier's desk and back again, so that change can be made without the help of cash boys. I have served this company in the capacity of book-keeper, salesman, etc., until the first of October 1891, when I began to work for W. H. Edgerly, Harvard '86, note broker, 40 State Street, Boston.

We moved our place of business to 60 State St. on April 1, '92, and I entered into partnership with Mr. Edgerly on the same date, the firm name being Edgerly & Crocker. We negotiate what are styled 'corporation,' 'collateral,' and 'city and town' notes with savings banks, etc."

NATHAN RICHARD GEORGE, Jr.

Graduated with the class of '90.

"At the time that the class of '89 left college I had nearly completed my third year at Harvard. I returned for a fourth and fifth year, taking the degree of A. M. in June 1891. Since September 1891 I have been teaching mathematics in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, besides taking an advanced course at Harvard."

ARTHUR McMASTER GOADBY.

"I am at work in a bank and would say that worshipping the golden calf is a sad and lamentable life after having been in youth the jovial devotee of nine healthy rollicking muses. I prefer the laughter of the muses to the bleat of the golden calf any day, but it is one of the first duties of life to learn and the sooner learned the better, — that we are here to be useful as well as sentimental. So I have hammered myself into that state that I can go calmly up to that golden calf and take him right by the horns, — but as long as the horns don't come off there can be no harm of my taking hold of them.

Right after leaving Cambridge I went to southeastern California and spent a year around Santa Barbara. I recovered my health, and returned to New York. I have been now four years studying banking and engaged at the Lincoln National Bank, — a growing institution."

FREDERIC SPRAGUE GOODWIN.

Graduated with class of '90. 1890 – 92, Harvard Law School.

Has resided at Pittsburg, Pa., studying law for two years. Was admitted to the bar, and has been practicing law since January 1, 1892.

EDWARD STETSON GRIFFING.

"I left the university soon after the beginning of our senior year and went to Germany. I was matriculated at the Technological

School in Charlottenburg with the privilege of also attending lectures at the University of Berlin. I paid particular attention to engineering and railroad building; meanwhile working on languages, and music. I then returned to Cambridge, and by taking several history courses the faculty granted me a degree. Then I started out for Chicago. I had no trouble in getting a clerkship in the Passenger Department of the Q and stayed there five months sending out circulars at $40 a month. I concluded that they did not need me as manager or president at once, so I left to go into business which was more congenial, and where there was more chance to learn general business and be promoted. I took a position with the Calumet Canning Company of Hammond, Ind. and Chicago, to look after their machinery. We had some three hundred hands and canned meat,— making our own cans. Besides this I soon became purchasing agent for all their factory and machinery supplies.

Left this to accept the position of manager of the Chicago Down Draft Boiler Company of Chicago, which may be something very good, or nothing. I am also partner in the firm of Kimball & Griffing, contracting engineers, for entire power plants."

Is a member of the Sunset Club, University Club, and Harvard Club of Chicago.

JOHN HAMILTON MORSE.

1889–92, Harvard Law School.

WILLIAM BUTLER OGDEN.

Has not been heard from.

FRANK LINCOLN OLMSTED.

"I lost my class standing with '89, through absence from college during its Sophomore year, and in consequence took my degree with '90.

My intention on leaving college was to study law, preferably patent law, but I embraced temporarily a favorable opportunity to teach. I found the work so congenial that I have settled down to it for good and all. After a year of teaching near Philadelphia, I came west last fall, to take charge of a number of young men as the nucleus of a preparatory school. I am busy planning and developing the Kenilworth School, from which in years to come I hope to send my regular quota to help swell the numbers at old Harvard.

My only literary work was an article on "The Tobacco Tax," in the January, 1891, number of the Quarterly Journal of Economics."

JOHN JOSEPH O'SULLIVAN.

Has been living at South Milford, Mass. "I intend to enter the class of '95 in the fall, and finish my college course."

WALLACE ASAHEL PARKER.

Graduated with the class of '91.

"I entered Harvard for the first time in September 1885, with the class of '89. A little after Thanksgiving of that fall I was taken sick, and withdrew from college. The following spring I attended medical lectures at the University of Vermont about six weeks. The following fall I taught a village school in Heartwellville, Vermont. Soon after the close of the term (June 1887) I came here (Ann Arbor, Michigan), where I attended the Department of Medicine and Surgery (allopathic), for the remainder of that school year, and the whole of the next (session of 1887–88). Instead of completing my course of medicine, which then required but one more year of work and attendance at the University of Michigan, I took the examinations for advanced standing in the Harvard Medical School; these I passed, and was on the point of matriculating, when I learned from the Dean of the College, of the probability of my being able to do the work required in the college course in three years. Accordingly I entered with the class of '92. After tolerably hard work for three years, I received the degree in June 1891. In September 1891 I returned to Ann Arbor, Michigan, and resumed my course of study at the Dept. of Medicine and Surgery, where I expect to receive the degree of M.D., June 1892."

ROBERT FORBES PERKINS.

"In July 1889, I went on a hunting trip to British Columbia with our class-mates, Geo. Keyes, Ned Storrow and Philip Codman. We had a successful trip, and returned to Boston in September, having visited the more important cities on the way down the coast to San Francisco. In October of that year I entered the banking house of Lee, Higginson & Co., 44 State St., Boston, and have been there ever since.

In June 1891 I was married to Anna Rodman Bowditch, eldest daughter of E. F. Bowditch of Framingham, Mass. Since then I have lived on my farm of 140 acres in Framingham, coming into town to business."

ASA EVERETT PERVERE.

"Just after leaving college, I started with E. Allen & Co., to learn the woolen business, and after spending four years there, I left to accept the situation I now hold, which is the management of the Boston end of Philips & Kunhardt's Lawrence Mills business. Outside of this work I have done little that is interesting, and almost all my leisure has been spent in yachting and outdoor sports."

Is a member of the Colonial Club of Cambridge, Boston Athletic Association, Corinthian Yacht Club, Republican Club of Mass.

CLERMONT LIVINGSTON DE PEYSTER.

Born, at Tivoli, N. Y., June 12, 1867.

GEORGE TURNER PHELPS.

"Since the class graduated the time has been quietly spent in piecing out the record and results of three years of invalidism. The present year I have been on leave of absence in San Francisco, Cal., and will return to Cambridge in June for a degree. Although uneventful ones, these years have been years of growth. I have taken as a profession teaching, using the arts of singing, piano-forte, and organ playing as means to the end of character building, and have settled in San Francisco.

None of us, I hope, knew less of the class in college than myself. Now a Harvard man is the traditional oasis in the desert, and an '89 man the unexpected friend met there as caravans cross on different paths."

MOSES IBN-ISAAC-FARAJ REUBEN.

HENRY DIKE SLEEPER.

"Hartford Theological Seminaay, graduating May 1891. Appointed instructor in music and choir-master in Beloit College, Wis., where I have resided since January 1, 1892. Ordained to the gospel ministry, November 1891, my particular field being church music.

This region is hungry for music. It is an inspiration to work out here after three years in Connecticut. I enjoy the people thoroughly. The college is really excellent and is making rapid strides ahead. Last week the corner stone of a new Science Hall was laid. It will cost $70,000 and already is well endowed. We have a beautiful chapel, as beautiful and complete as any I have seen in New England.

I enjoy all my work, but have too much to do. I am planning for study in Germany next year."

TOWNSEND SMITH.

Born, at New York, N. Y., May 18, 1867.

JOHN MILLS WILSON.

Graduated with the class of '90.

"I left college in the fall of 1888, chiefly because I had so injured my health by attention to business in vacation as to make it seriously doubtful whether I could complete the course. After some months of rest I was licensed to preach by the Unitarian denomination, and supplied pulpits until the autumn of 1889. I then returned to College and finished my course with the class of 1890. During that college year I also preached frequently. All this while I lived in Roxbury, and from November 1890 until now I have been the minister of the First Unitarian Church of Hudson, Mass. I was not ordained, however, until January 1891.

In April 1891, at Roxbury, Mass., I was married to Miss Helen Bowker, of that place, daughter of Mr. Luke Bowker. From the time of my marriage I have lived in Hudson, Mass."

HARVARD, 1889-92.

BY CARLETON HUNNEMAN.

The impetus given to Harvard by the class of '89 has sent the University forward at a rapid pace. The ancient graduate of three years' standing coming back to Cambridge for the first time since his Commencement, will be surprised at the many changes that have been made within and around the college yard. A handsome gateway of brick, sandstone, and iron now stands between Harvard and Massachusetts Halls, facing the church in the Square. It is in the English style of the last century, and extends on both sides almost to the buildings flanking it. In the elaborate wrought iron work over the entrance the year 1889 is immortalized. Still another gate between Holworthy and Thayer was erected a year ago. It is more modest than the main gate, but it is tasteful, and of the same general design. Mr. G. von L. Meyer, '79, is its donor.

Walter Hastings Hall, the new dormitory on North Avenue behind the Law School, was occupied in November 1889, and is very popular.

Another section has been added to the Agassiz Museum. On the site of the old Hasty Pudding Building on Holmes Field, stands the Carey Building, the gift of our class-mate. It contains a rowing-tank, base-ball cage, fives court, baths, and dressing-rooms, and is used mainly by the 'varsity teams.

One of the gifts most appreciated by the students is the Weld Boat House, given by Mr. Geo. W. Weld, '60. It stands on the Cambridge bank of the Charles, just below the Boylston St. Bridge. The building is of two stories, with broad, comfortable piazzas overlooking the river, where the wearied oarsmen may lounge at their ease. The Weld Boat Club is open to all members of the University, on payment of a moderate annual fee, and has at present a membership of about 330. It has four-oars, pair-oars and singles, which are in constant use, and races are frequently held. Mr. Weld's object — to revive interest in rowing at Harvard — seems destined to be fulfilled. The 'varsity and class crews still keep to their old quarters.

Across the River above the bridge lies the Soldiers' Field, the future play ground of the University. It is the gift of Mr. Henry L. Higginson, '55, in memory of five of his college-mates, who died in the Rebellion. The field contains twenty acres — now a beautiful stretch of smooth, green turf, bounded for a long distance by the river. Fifty thousand dollars are needed to lay it out, and an appeal to the graduates has been issued already.

The Porcellian Club has demolished its old quarters, and erected a handsome club-house on the site.

Quincy Hall, a private dormitory, has sprung up on the corner of Main and Bow Sts., to rival Beck Hall, over the way.

The old Johnson mansion at the corner of Kirkland and Oxford Sts. has been bought by the Corporation, and is now the Foxcroft Club. It offers a place for study and rest for those students who do not live in Cambridge, and board can be obtained there at very low rates, on the average of $2.35 per week — an opportunity which is taken advantage of by some two hundred men.

Dane Hall has had to submit to renovation. The upper story has been utilized for lecture rooms, as also the back room on the ground floor. The Co-operative Society has been restricted to the lower front rooms, and has revenged itself by tearing down a partition or two.

The Institute of 1770 has sprung from its ashes, and now has a club house on Mt. Auburn St. The club is conducted on the lines of the Hasty Pudding, and has the attractions of a billiard room and a modest restaurant.

Norton's Field is a new play-ground back of Divinity Hall, leased by the University to relieve the old fields. It is hardly more than a make-shift, and is not very popular — being low and of muddy tendencies. It is devoted largely to practice and scrub games when the other fields are occupied.

The college janitor system has undergone a change. There is now a head janitor with his office in Massachusetts Hall, a uniformed porter who lives in each dormitory, and official goodies, in blue dresses and white mob caps, more picturesque and not less worthy than the generation before them.

There are other and different changes far more important, — the Overseers, the Faculty, and the growing needs of the University have brought them about.

To begin with, there is now a committee of the Faculty who act as supervisors of the freshmen — commonly known as "Nurses." Each student is required to consult his adviser as to his choice of studies. The Dean may, at his discretion, place under the charge of a private tutor any student who has been excluded from a course because of unsatisfactory work. Hour examinations have become the rule, and may be held without notice. Attendance at lectures is strictly required, and absence "for a solid day or more" demands an explanation.

In May 1890, by vote of the Corporation and Overseers, the Faculty of Harvard College ceased to exist, and the Faculty of Arts and Science took its place, controlling the College, the Graduate School, and the Scientific School, the Faculty of which was also extinguished. The Graduate School was organized as a separate branch of the University co-ordinate with the College. Each of these departments has its dean, as well as the Faculty of Arts and Sciences.

The Academic Council of old is now the University Council with slightly increased power.

It may be well to stop for a moment to chronicle two events of more than passing interest. They are, first, the appointment in June 1891, of Prof. Le Baron R. Briggs as dean of the college vice Prof. Clement L. Smith, resigned, and second, the severing by Miss Harris of her connection with the University. The influences of U. 5 are now wholly masculine. The class will pardon the digression.

In 1890–1, English D, the last vestige of prescribed work for seniors was swept away, and Physics A ceased to be a course in the proper sense, being no longer prescribed, and requiring no examinations.

In 1890, the Faculty of Arts and Sciences proposed to the Overseers that the college course should be reduced from $18\frac{1}{2}$ to 16 courses, that the degree of A.B. might be taken in three years. This step was taken at the instance of the Medical School. The Overseers in April 1891, voted down the proposition 20 to 1, Pres. Eliot being alone in the affirmative. But anticipated studies will be allowed to count toward the degree. The result of the grant of this privilege is that certain summer courses can be counted, and a freshman is permitted onentering to anticipate any electives, thus indirectly making it possible to take the degree in three years. The tendency seems to be setting toward this, and the number of three-years bachelors increases annually.

Within the past year, the Faculty of the Medical School has voted that beginning with 1892–3, the degree of M.D. shall be given only on the completion of a four years' course.

Our Summer Schools promise to become permanent, the number of students attending last year being 321. Twenty-seven courses will be offered during the coming summer, exclusive of those in the Medical School.

Owing to the increase in the number of courses given this year, it was found necessary to add another lecture hour to each day. Accordingly the usual afternoon lectures begin at 1.30 P.M., and continue until 4.30 P.M., and on Saturday from 1.30 P.M. to 2.30 P.M. Among the courses now offered are several on the Theory and Art of Pedagogy, open to bachelors of arts and others of equal fitness.

Experimental changes have been made in Memorial to accommodate the growing classes. One third of the tables have been made general, no seats being reserved, and by lengthening the meal hours and increasing the number of waiters, double the usual number have been served. Next year this arrangement will be extended to the whole Hall, or the old system will be restored and another dining hall projected.

The need of better library facilities has become so urgent that at the instance of the Crimson (which by the way is now the Harvard Crimson), the students were solicited for contributions for the desired additiou. The results however, was not as successful as was hoped for.

The College determined last year to light all the buildings by electricity from a plant of its own, but the plan was defeated by the refusal of the Cambridge City Government at the instance of the Edison Electric Lighting Company, to allow the wires to be laid under Kirkland Street.

The Law School has grown to such an extent that next year the larger classes will be divided into sections. An additional professor, and an assistant professor have beon added to the Faculty.

The gifts to the University in money from June 1889 to January 1892 amounted in round numbers to $850,000.00, of which $200,000.00 is for an Art Museum.

The following figures will indicate the rapid increase in the number of students in the last few years:

	1888–89	1889–90	1890–91	1891–92
Freshmen,	309	323	366	381
Seniors,	210	278	289	271
Total of Undergraduates,	1180	1271	1339	1456
Total of students in University,	1889	2079	2271	2663

Harvard's athletic history has been indeed eventful. In the fall of 1889, after her defeat in foot-ball by Princeton, Harvard, incensed at what was believed to be professionalism on the part of Princeton, and feeling that there was little reason to hope for reform, unanimously resolved at a mass meeting to withdraw from the intercollegiate foot-ball league, Yale apparently being of the same mind. The undergraduate sentiment at Yale did not sustain her graduates in this, and Harvard pursued her course alone.

Charges and counter-charges by Princeton and Harvard, resulted in official investigations by the athletic committees of both colleges, each exonerating to its own satisfaction the members of its own team, and there the matter rested. In this unfortunate disagreement the first formal charges were made by Princeton, — Harvard's action being simply a withdrawal. Certain stringent rules were now adopted by Harvard to lessen the possibility of having men on the team who were not bona-fide students.

Harvard's battered team was defeated by Yale, 12–0, at Springfield, and she in turn succumbed to Princeton. Our freshmen won at New Haven, 35–12.

In January 1890 the Athletic Committee voted that Harvard's athletic organizations should engage in intercollegiate contests only in New England, — the Mott Haven team being excepted for that year. The effect of this was to withdraw Harvard from all contests with Princeton. Accordingly Harvard's resignation from the base ball league was tendered.

A proposition was made to Yale for an arrangement to continue during the years 1890–92, the important features of which were that only undergraduates including specials should play on athletic teams, and that a man should not be eligible after playing on a University team for three years. Two foot-ball games were to be played, one in Cambridge, the other in New York or New Haven, as Yale should elect, Yale preferred one foot-ball game to be played in New York, and that specials should be excluded from all contests. As neither college would concede anything, these overtures failed.

In the spring of 1890, four base ball games were arranged with Yale, with a fifth in case of a tie. Yale won the series in the tie game at Springfield, and also the race at New London. Harvard '93, following the illustrious precedent set by '89, won both of the base ball contests with the Yale freshmen.

In the fall of 1890 Harvard won both doubles and singles in the intercollegiate tennis tournament. In foot-ball we conquered Yale for the first time since 1875, winning at Springfield, 12–6. The Freshmen also defeated Yale at Cambridge, 14–4. The victory of the 'Varsity was commemorated by a splendid celebration with a bon-fire on Jarvis, and the procession was "quietly" addressed by Pres. Eliot and Prof. Hart. The bon-fire was largely of cord-wood, bought and paid for! A complimentary dinner was given the team at the Revere House. This was also enthusiastic and orderly.

During the winter the petition of the cricket team to play its annual match in Philadelphia, was refused under the New England rule, while an exception was again made in favor of the Mott Haven team.

The petition of the Boat Club to employ W. A. Bancroft, '78, as coach of the crew for three years for a sum of $10,000, subscribed by graduates in New York, was refused by the Athletic Committee in January 1891.

What points more strongly to a future club league with Yale is the donation by graduates of a cup for track athletics, to be competed for by Harvard and Yale for nine years, the time and place to be determined by each college alternately. The first meeting took place in Cambridge, in May 1891, Harvard winning 85–27.

Harvard did not meet Yale in base ball during the season of 1891. An agreement had seemingly been made, when Yale without any previous intimation, refused to play with Harvard on the ground that the contract made by Harvard's representatives had not been fulfilled. The principal objection seemed to be that Harvard had not consulted Yale in treating with Princeton. What was at most a misunderstanding, was insisted on by Yale as a breach of an agreement, and most favorable terms for a new series offered by Harvard were refused. Considerable ill feeling was engendered by Yale's action — a matter to be deprecated, since relations between the colleges has been apparently on a satisfactory basis.

Harvard won the Mott Haven games once more, Yale second. The first intercollegiate cricket match between the two colleges was played at New Haven, Harvard again winning. On the same day the Freshmen, having previously lost their game in Cambridge to the Yale freshmen, turned the tables on them at New Haven.

May 29, 1891, Harvard defeated Bowdoin in a two-mile race on the Charles, by three lengths.

The crowning event of the year was the race with Yale, when Harvard won by eleven lengths. In a three-cornered race between the Yale, Columbia, and Harvard freshmen, Harvard was last. An agreement was entered into to row in the 'varsity races at New London for the next five years.

In the fall of 1891, another agreement was made by which Yale and Harvard are to play the annual foot-ball game at Springfield for four years. This is a triumph for the policy of independence of other colleges for which Harvard has stood of late.

The intercollegiate tennis match of 1891 was won by Harvard both in doubles and singles. We lost the foot-ball game at Springfield, 10–0, Harvard being clearly outplayed by Yale's more scientific game. No ill-feeling was displayed, and the game was remarkable for gentlemanly conduct and freedom from accidents.

In 1892, as the reason for refusing to compete with Princeton no longer existed, Harvard, maintaining her independence, arranged two ball games with Princeton with a possibility of a third game in case of a tie. It hath pleased fortune to give us both games, so a third is unnecessary. Whether a foot-ball game will be agreed on depends largely on Princeton's relations with Yale — with these, of course, Harvard has no concern.

Yale will play two base-ball games with us, but under no circumstances will she play a third. This is plainly unsatisfactory, and such an unreasonable refusal prevents the existence of that good feeling between the colleges which all should desire.

The Freshmen again in 1892, following the precedent of the class before them, lost their game in Cambridge, but won in some unaccountable way in New Haven.

Harvard again won the Harvard–Yale track-athletics, 61–51, and, as usual, the Mott Haven, Yale second.

The Freshmen will row a three cornered race as was the case last year. Such is our athletic history.

Harvard's policy of independence seems to work satisfactorily, and is making headway in spite of the anxiety of other colleges to fetter her with leagues. It will be noticed that the New Englond rule has become practically a dead-letter.

During the past two winters the Glee and Banjo Clubs have made western trips, and have attempted to disabuse the west of its mistaken idea of Harvard.

There have been changes in the Faculty since '89 graduated. Prof. Bowen is dead, also Prof. Lovering and James Russell Lowell. Asst. Prof. Cohn has become a professor at Columbia.

This record would be incomplete without mention of the drowning of Adelbert Shaw, '94, a member of the 'Varsity Crew, early in April 1891.

He capsized while out in a single, and went down immediately, owing probably to cramp. He had been a substitute on the foot-ball team, and would probably have played centre last fall had he lived. He was much liked by those who had an opportunity to know him. A memorial service was held in the chapel at the same hour that his funeral was taking place at his home in New York, and the greater part of the college attended. Such sad accidents are fortunately rare with us.

CLASS FUND.

The Treasurer submits the following report as to the condition of the finances of the Class on June 20, 1892. Although written reports have been presented on Commencement Day each year since the graduation of the Class, it has been thought best to give here a detailed statement of receipts and expenditures since March 1, 1890, the date of the statement published in the Class Secretary's first report.
